Napoleon J. Hardy, of this town, brought up the only matter of business transacted, that of raising the amount of the annual dues and after much time had been taken up with the pros and constit was voted to leave the dues at the same sum as at present. It was further voted to boom the membership and make a special effort to get young men to join the association, which is made up of men from all over Middlesex County who are doing excel-ient service and incidentally having a good time doing it. After the meeting Santa Claus, in the person of Franklin Cousens, appeared in the midst of the party and distributed the gifts from a huge tree. There was something for every one and then some more, so that the round of fun was kept up for over two hours. All the gifts were jokes and as each member opened his package great merriment resulted. After the tree had been stripped a collation was served.

A Doll Fruit Vender at Soldiers' Toyland.

Such a varied and unique display of dolls and toys probably has never before been seen in this country as that on exhibition in New York city. It is held under the auspices of the Lafayette fund, and the proceeds are to be sent to France for the benefit of the war sufferers. Many French artists have contributed their best skill to the charming pictures. Besides the thousands of individual dolls, there are hiswith dolls in correct costumes and settings. One scene, a portion of which is here illustrated, is an exact reproduction of a French market in miniature. In the picture is shown a fruit and vegetable seller. On the stand in front of her are displayed her wares, eoch perfect to the last detail. At the front of the table resting on the ground is a bag of tiny potatoes, each one sawed from wood by painstaking hands, a replica, except in size, of the homely tuber.

"Fire on the Mountain."

In this game there are two rings of players, one outside the other. The players forming the inner ring sit down, and those in the outer ring should be a good wide space between the two rings. A single player stands in the center and presently calls out "Fire on the mountain! Run, run, run!" Those on the outside then gal lop round as fast as they can, the rest sitting still, and the running is con tinued till the one in the center cries "Stop."

Then everybody, including the single player, tries to find a place behind one of the inner ring, and the boy or girl who is left out must take his or her turn in the center.

INSECT MARVELS.

What the Hop Aphis Unchecked Would Do In One Year.

Few persons, writes James Buckland in a report of the Smithsonian institution, realize how enormous is the number of insect species or how amazing is their power of multiplication. The number of insect species is greater by far than that of the species of all other living creatures combined. More than 300,000 have been described, and probably twice that number remain to be examined. Virtually all living animals, as well as most plants, supply food for these incomputable hordes. The fecundity of certain insect forms is astounding. Riley once computed that the progeny of the hop aphis, which sees thirteen generations born to it in a single year, would, if unchecked to the end of the twelfth generation, multiply to the inconceivable number of ten sextillions of individuals. Supplementing that calculation, Forbush says that if this brood were marshaled in line, ten to the inch, it would extend to a point so sunk in the profundity of space that light from the head of the procession, traveling at the rate of 184,000 miles a second, would take 2,500 years to reach the earth...

Kirkland has computed that in eight years the progeny of one pair of gypsy moths could destroy all the foliage in the United States. A Canadian entomologist declares that in one season the descendants of a pair of potato bugs would, if unchecked, number 60,-

The voracity of insects is almost as astounding as their power of reproduction. The daily ration in leaves of a caterpillar is equal to twice its own weight. If a horse were to eat as much exhibition and have produced some he would require a ton of hay every twenty-four hours. Forbush says that a certain flesh eating larva will contoric scenes and representations of sume in twenty-four hours 200 times French everyday life all worked out its original weight. A human child, to do as well, would have to eat in the first day of its life 1,500 pounds of beef.

> Trouvelot, who made a special study of the subject, affirms that the food taken by a single silkworm in fifty-six days equals 86,000 times its original weight at hatching. What destruction this one insect would cause if even a one-hundredth part of its eggs ever hatched! The facts show how great is the value to man of the insect eating

> "But," you ask, "what is a bird's engine, and where does it carry fuel?"

A bird's engine is really its wings and the muscles which move them. It is one of the most perfect engines in the world. It is simple, but strong. It works easily, but it is powerful and rarely gets out of order.

For many years man tried to make flying machines which should have wings like those of birds. But he never succeeded. He could not make even a feather! Finally he discovered that if he would make a machine that would fly he must give it wings and an enstand close behind them, though there gine. So he constructed an aeroplane, which has wide, stiff wings, or "planes," measuring about thirty feet from tip to tip. These wings cannot be flapped, and in themselves they furnish no power. But to them man added an engine driven by gasoline and electricity. This engine turns a long bladed propeller, which urges the aeroplane forward, while the planes support it when it is in motion But a bird's wing, we must remember, is both plane and engine. It gives support as well as power. It is therefore a far more remarkable machine than the one made by man.-Frank M. Chapman in St. Nicholas.

No matter what other economies the average mother may feel called upon to practice, there is one department in which she will find it the truest economy to purchase with the greatest care, choosing only materials of the best quality procurable, since they cannot fail to prove the wisest investment in the end. Where children are concerned, so called cheap garments are in reality the most extravagant, since they can never withstand the rough handling which needs must fall to their share, and even though the young people should quickly outgrow their be let down as occasion requires, always supposing that there are no still younger folks to whom the frocks in question can descend without altera-

Cherish Your Illusions.

It has often been said that a woman is as old as she feels. 'Another worldlywise saying informs us that you can always tell a woman's age by the number of illusions she has. Both contain a great deal of truth, and both are closely related. The woman who retains her illusions until she passes the half century mark is much younger at heart than the sophisticated, blase woman of thirty.

Ideals, illusions, enthusiasm, all are a part of youth and belong to that rose colored period of life. So long as we retain them we keep our youth. but the minute they leave us, whether we are thirty or fifty, we are no longer young. Age comes with the loss of our ideals. If we only realized how quickly we age when we become blase and bored we would cling to our enthusiasms as we would to youth itself.

piled on top. Prune Pudding.—One pound stewed prunes, whites of four eggs and one cupful of sugar. Drain the juice from the prunes, remove the stones and chop. Beat the eggs stiff, add the of the temperature and the occasion sugar gradually, then stir in the chopped prunes. Bake twenty minutes. Serve cold with whipped cream flavored with vanilla.

> Rice Pudding.-Mix four cupfuls of milk, one-third cupful of rice, one-half cupful of seeded raisins, one-third cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt. It is necessary to stir occasionally to prevent rice and raisins from settling to the bottom of the dish. If raisins are not used some flavoring should be added.

SOME BEAUTY DON'TS.

A Few Simple Habits That Help Stave Off Seediness.

Don't wear thin shoes and gossamer stockings in cold weather or you will have that pinched, chilled look that is so unbecoming. Don't economize in shoe leather. It is economy which will probably cost you dear.

Don't give up taking exercise even if the weather is bad. A brisk walk on a cold day is a complexion beautifier. Don't fail to dry your hands thoroughly after washing if you wish to prevent them from getting chapped. Don't forget to wear a veil if your skin is susceptible to cold winds. Don't wear heavy headgear. It is very bad for the hair. Don't let your rooms get hot and stuffy. Always leave the window slightly open at the top. An excellent lotion for preserving the color of fair hair is made from camomile flowers. An ounce of these should be placed in a bowl and about a pint of boiling water poured over them. Cover the bowl and allow to stand for a couple of hours, then strain carefully and use occasionally, dabbing it into the roots of the hair.

The more fair hair is brushed the better it looks. Brushing gives a gloss which eventually becomes permanent and so is far better than what brilliantine could impart; also it frees the scalp from dust and makes the hair grow. The brushes must be kept scrupluously clean; should be washed every morning and left to dry.

Canary Crusts. Take some stale pieces of bread, cut into squares and thin slices of gruyere cheese, also cut into squares. Now take one piece of bread at a time, butter it, place a slice of cheese on the bread, cover with mustard and then cover with another slice of buttered bread, so that when finished the bread is evenly cut and the cheese between. spoonful vinegar, one teaspoonful gin- Have some butter melted in a frying ger, one teaspoonful salt and enough pan, fry to a golden brown and serve with a lettuce salad.

HELPING THE PRESIDENT.

John Cheerfully Backed McKinley In a Diplomatic Grisis.

At the time of the Boxer rebellion President McKinley was taking a needed rest at his home in Canton, O. The long distance telephone was situated between two windows running to the floor of the room. Under one of them, projecting from the foundation of the house, was a faucet of water to the lawn. One morning the president was called to the long distance telephone by Secretaries Hay and Root. A message had been received in Washington from the czar of all the Russias and the German emperor. It requested that the president of the United States should place the American soldiers under the command of Count Waldersee, the German general, in order to insure harmony of action on the part of the allied armies.

There was some paving going on in the street opposite the house, and as the day was warm the workmen became thirsty, so one of their number was sent for water. While the chief executive was consulting with his secretaries concerning this important matter over the telephone, John walked up, hung his pail on the faucet and turned on the water. The water running into the pail made a great deal of noise and disturbed the president, the windows being open. He asked his secretaries to wait a moment, and then, leaning forward and looking out of the window, said:

"John, that water running in the pail makes a very disturbing noise, and I am busy talking over the long distance telephone. Please turn it off for a few moments."

"All right, major," replied John, and turning off the water he filled his pipe and lighted it, and then, sitting down with his back to the house. listened to the conversation which the president was carrying on.

Here was the ruler of a hundred millions of people engaged in the transaction of most important and serious public business, and there was a common laborer intruding himself into the transaction, but McKinley was not impatient, nor did he resent this interference. He dictated to his secretaries over the telephone the reply, consent ing that the American troops should be placed under the command of the German general on the condition that this government at any time reserved the right to revoke the permission, provided the policy of the army so commandof the United States.

Having dictated this important dispatch, the president hung up the re-

"John." he said, "I am through now, and you can turn on the water again." John did so and then, leaning on the window sill, said

"Major, I hope you are going to setdon't need to be too dern yielding, for Inspiration In Dreams.

Coleridge must be added to the list of authors who have found inspiration in dreams, for he himself has told us that he composed over 200 lines of the "Kublai Khan" during a sleep of three hours. On awaking he wrote down the fragment now existing, but the interruption of a visitor banished the rest from his mind. The first idea of "The Ancient Mariner," too, was suggested to the poet by a dream of his friend Cruikshank. And Kipling's "Greatest Story In the World" was but the half remembered dream of a commonplace young man.-London Mail.

What Makes Mirrors Reflect? Mirrors that are made of glass have metal placed on one side of the glass. The light will pass through the glass, but will not pass through the metal backing. Light has the property of bounding from a surface that it cannot penetrate, the same as a ball would when thrown against a surface that it cannot penetrate. The light passes through the glass of the mirror, meets the metal backing and then bounds from it. This bounding of the light from the metal surface is called reflection, and mirrors are said to reflect. -St. Nicholas.

A German Legend.

The Germans have a legend of Frederick Barbarossa that he is not dead. but in an enchanted sleep, sitting with his knights at a marble table in the cavern of Kyffhausen, in the Harz mountains. His long red beard has grown during this long enchantment and, covering the table, descends to the floor, and he sits thus waiting the moment that will set him free. There he has been kept for long centuries. There he must stay for ages.

One of a Pair. The applicant for the post of butler seemed somewhat dense, but in other respects fairly suitable. Almost as an after thought the mistress of the house put a final query. "I suppose you are a single man?" she asked.

"Er-er-no, muni." he stammered. "I'm twins!"-London Opinion.

Woman's World

A Pioneer In a New Field of Art.

Once a water color and miniature painter whose works have been shown at the academy, Miss Mary D. Clarke, amid a remarkably fine setting of Japanese prints, satsuma, old brasses, Persian rugs and antique mahogany at her studio in New York, is now making a success of color photography. Miss Clarke specializes on photographing household pets and children.

Her pictures on glass are seen in small boxes so arranged that the scenes get their effect from the sun at the back. There is every variety of scene also, from landscapes to views of interiors. Most striking, naturally, are gardens with all sorts of floral blooms. By the process no shade or tint escapes the camera, while atmosphere in out of doors scenes is preserved, even to the time of the year or to the mood of a day. It is impossible to suggest the beauty of effects obtained by photographing children with this color process, surely the most important event in the history of photography since the advent of the daguerreotype—the rare, lovely effect of golden curls, blue eyes and bright coloring, the whole general alive impression. The lower cut depicts Miss Clarke standing in her garden. The color photograph vividly brings out the oriental tones of her mandarin's coat, sea blues, burnt orange and gold, while the glow of the foliage behind her has all the luminousness of sunlight on greenery in contrast with the hollyhocks in the foreground. For the Babies.

For a good all round rug in a room where children run about an army blanket is just the thing. It clings to the floor, and dust cannot go through it. It sweeps easily and washes without any shrinking or wrinkling.

If you pin fresh ribbon strings to the baby's dainty embroidered silk caps with little gold pins the life of the cap will be greatly lengthened if tiny pieces of white silk are sewed with small stitches to the inside of the cap, where the ribbon strings are pinned. To keep the front of a baby's frock dry during the teething period baste or pin with tiny safety pins half a dress shield to the underside of a bib. The unfinished edge of the shield should be bound with tape. The mattress on a child's crib may be kept from getting rust marked by the wire springs by placing four window shade sticks an even distance apart on top of the springs.

When feeding a small child bread spread with butter or jam cut the bread into thin slices and fold over into sandwiches. There will then be no butter side to fall on the carpet, nor will they get the butter or jam on their fingers or dresses.

To keep a little girl's hair ribbons from mussing roll them each night on a piece of cardboard. This will save frequent pressing. The cardboard may be covered with silk.

Chat Deadly Room

Recently a furnisher and decorator was called upon to criticise a room that had been redecorated and refurnished. It was a sitting room in the home of a trim middle aged woman. Everything in the room was neatness personified. The furniture was good, the rugs well chosen, the draperies and wall paper correct. Yet there seemed to be something wrong about that room.

The housewife felt it, but it took several minutes' puzzling before the expert realized that what gave to the place its suggestion of stiffness so closely approaching real discomfort was that it totally lacked perquisites. It had the deadliness of a room that is never actually lived in. It was entirely lacking in personal touch. There was nothing to bespeak the taste, habits or character of her who dwelt in it.

If it had only had a cushion among the others that looked as though it might have been worked by the fingers of a friend-if there had been a rack of magazines or a table with some favorite book open face down upon itif there had been a musical instrument or a set of golf sticks in the corner or a bit of sewing or even a bird or a box of ferns-some spirit might have breathed into it.

But as it was, in spite of the fact that it was faultlessly as well as expensively furnished, it was as lifeless as a wax lay figure well coifed and Paris gowned smiling a stuck-on smile from behind the plate glass of some store show window.

Among the extras that are most desirable adjuncts to a sense of comfort at the home are a variety of small tables. Hardly can a room be cheerfully settled without at least one small table in it. It may be a little reading table at the head of the bed or a teakwood stand near the window, a card table or one to write on.

Of all the small tables put on the market this year none can equal in general utility as well as seemliness the combination table tea wagon.

The new type has a top tray, with a good sized drawer beneath it. In the center is a shelf, so that papers and magazines ordinarily kept on top may be hurriedly cleared off, and lower down is still another cased in shelf.

Sooner or later some enterprising manufacturer will make such a table with a drop leaf at either side. With such an adjustment a table of this sort could be laden with hot dishes in the kitchen and wheeled into the living room. The leaves being set up would enlarge it sufficiently for two or four persons to dine at it comfortably

The makeup table is the latest temptation to women who enjoy the use of fine toilet articles and who, realizing now the almost prohibitive price of imported creams, lotions and cosmetics, are careful to keep such treasures under lock and key.

The makeup table is about as high as an ordinary dressing table, but measures only 12 by 14 inches across. It looks like a box on legs, and that really is about what it is. The lid lifts up and is lined with a mirror. In the body of the box are little compartments for the various powders, perfumes, etc., and the lid fastens down with a fine spring lock.

THE POPULAR TRICORN.

Modish and Durable. This Model Suits the Business Girl.

With a brown worsted suit and a beaver tippet goes this brown velvet tricorn, across one side of which fly two fur sparrows. Simple in outline, becoming to almost any face and made of good materials, such a hat speaks for itself.

Child Hygiene For January.

Anxious mothers often err in one of two ways in looking after the physical wants of young children. They either line the medicine chest with gargles, easter oil, cathartics and dope for colds or they neglect the child's needs entirely. Physicians are recommending mothers to get further away from using the old time honored medicine chest. They should take the suggestion offered by the Chinese physicians, who make it their business to keep their patients well.

If you are a rational mother you will give your child a wholesome and liberal diet. This means plenty of milk and fresh eggs and a good portion of fresh vegetables and fruit. Meat once a day for young children, but they need it that often to make blood and strength. One of the simplest ways of keeping children well is to give them plenty of fruit and water.

Newspaper Syndicate.

By M. QUAD Copyright, 1915, by the McClure

Two or three weeks since Mr. and Mrs. Bowser had a talk on natural history, and Mr. Bowser got the worst of it and a bump from the family druggist besides. He admitted to himself that he did, and, though he is not a revengeful man, he felt that he must get even. He therefore planned a little plan, and for a week he spent an hour or so in the library every evening.

Mrs. Bowser did not ask what was up, and he was conceited enough to think because he did not tell her that she would not find out. She did find out, and she was all ready for him when he laid down his newspaper the other evening and in a voice he tried to make careless asked:

"Mrs. Bowser, what is a quid nunc?" "It is an animal a good deal like an alligator," she answered promptly, "It has six legs and six claws on each foot. Instead of having the hide of an alligator it has soft, long fur, and it is sometimes used for muffs. Its principal food is fish, and it has a throat and gullet large enough to take in a shark five feet long. When provoked it will attack a man, and unless he is prepared for it he may lose his life." Mr. Bowser flushed up. and his mouth twitched, and he was about to slap his leg when he stayed his hand: He had gone to the dictionary to find out what the word signified, and he had led Mrs. Bowser into his trap.

WALKS ABOUT ON HIS FOREFEET.

He wanted to shout with laughter, but there was more to come. Presently he quietly asked:

"I should like to see a quid nunc, but I suppose I never shall. Did you ever hear of a similia similibus curan-

"Of course," she glibly answered. "It is an animal about as large as a kangaroo and walks about on his forefeet with its hind ones in the air. At intervals it calls out in a plaintive way, like a child lost in the forest. It is found mostly in the wooded mountains of Brazil. It has such a fierce temper that when the natives hear one call out they rush into their cabins and lock and bolt their doors. It will carry off and devour men, women, children, dogs, goats and cats. No zoological garden has ever succeeded in taming one. It is well for us, Mr. Bowser, that the similia curantur does not live among us.

Mr. Bowser was red clear around his neck, and his eyes twinkled. The conceited Mrs. Bowser was preparing a great fall for herself. It would be something that he could throw at her for years and years to come. With a his face that the man of drugs exsuppressed chuckle be asked:

"There is the e pluribus unum. I don't remember to have ever seen one. Perhaps you have?"

"Three or four of them. Mr. Bowser. but not in zoos. They are a rare animal and part bird, and their backs are covered with spines as long as a tenpenny nail. Besides this, they have a stinger a foot long for attack. What ever that stinger reaches dies. They feed on what is called skunk's cabbage, and their breath can be scented half a mile away. It is a native of Borneo, and such is its flerceness that it has been known to attack fifty men at once. Mr. Bowser, if we had the e pluribus unum there would be fewer men running out of nights."

Mr. Bowser had to laugh in spite of himself, but turned it off by saying that he was amused by something he had witnessed on the street car that afternoon and that he would tell about it later on. Meanwhile what was a jucherie?

Why, I only know from what I have read," was the answer. The jucherie is any native of the cannibal islands. It is a large birdlike animal—that is, ft has feet like an alligator, wings like a bird and eyes and beak like an owl. It has a tail ringed around like a coon's. When the cannibals catch a missionary and roast him the jucherie can smell the banquet a mile off. He hastens to the feast, and unless the savages flee and leave him to eat at his leisure he kills five or six of them. The United States is no place for the jucherie. We never roast our missionaries, and the animal will dine on nothing else."

Mr. Bowser rose up and went to a back window to look out. He never was so tickled in his life before, but he must keep it to himself. After a minute he came back and sat down and

"I heard some men talking about the 'S O S' the other day, but I couldn't make out what it was or is. Is it a bird or animal, Mrs. Bowser?"

"Why, a bird, of course," she answered. "It is some such bird as the condor of Peru, but curiously enough it has one long wing and one short one. Thus when it flies it flies in a circle, and to get anywhere it must descend to the ground and make use of its legs to get over the ground. Its legs are weak and tottering, and as it walks it utters cries of '8 0 8.' Although the strange bird is a native of Java, I think I have heard its cries several times right here. They are mournful beyond description. They make you think of a poor orphan child wandering in the dark and expecting to be devoured by a panther at any moment. What is the matter with you, Mr. Bowser?"

"I-I feel too full," was the hesitating reply. "Mebbe it's a case of indi-

"But I have. It was when I was a little girl, however. There has not been one seen in this country in a great many years, and I believe the thing is extinct. I was out in the woods gathering wild flowers, and suddenly I heard a gruff voice speaking to me. I thought it was a man and looked up with a start of alarm. It was no man, Mr. Bowser, but it was a mon ami. After I got home and told my father about it he said it was, and my Sunday school teacher said it was, and the preacher said it was, and all agreed that I had had a narrow escape, for the thing did not attack me." "But how did it look?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"It had the general appearance of a monkey. But it had six legs, two tails and four eyes. Its two front legs were like human arms and were armed with six claws on each foot. Its eyes shone like coals of fire, and its teeth were as long as a finger. It was a dreadful' looking animal, Mr. Bowser, and no wonder that little girl, only ten years old, was almost frozen with terror. I screamed. I shrieked. I called upon my father and my mother and my brother Ben to save me. I should have called upon you, but I had not met you then. The thing screamed when I screamed. It shricked when I shricked. Then it began to run backward in a circle around me. I saw that three of the legs were so constructed that it could run backward as well as it could run forward with the other three. It kept up its running backward for several minutes, and then uttered a whoop and began to run forward. It was horrible, Mr. Bowser, to hear its teeth clicking together and to see those four eyes emitting sparks of fire."

"But get along to the end," said Mr. Bowser, who half believed the story in spite of himself.

"The end is very near, my dear," replied Mrs. Bowser. "The thing came closer and closer and was preparing to spring upon me when I fainted away. What else could a poor girl do? When I recovered consciousness the terror had departed, and I was unharmed. He had simply untied my sunbonnet and made off with it. He probably wanted it for his Santa Claus gift to his own little girl. That's all, Mr. Bowser. I notice that you are getting

"Y-e-s," he answered as he rose up. "I think I will go over to the drug store and get a few troches for my throat. It feels rather stuffed up."

When Mr. Bowser got out to the gate he leaned on it and laughed until the tears came to his eyes. He had caught Mrs. Bowser at last, and he must tell the druggist about it. He laughed all the way over to the store, and when he entered he had such a broad grin on claimed:

"Why, Bowser, what has happened?" And when Mr. Bowser told him all they laughed and chuckled and pounded on the counter in unison, and the druggist said:

"Bowser, you are great! You are simply immense! By George, by George, you have done nobly!'

And about the same time Mrs. Bowser was wiping the tears from her eyes caused by laughter and saying to her-"Poor Mr. Bowser! If a wife didn't

Mater Inside and Out

If you want your children to avoid many diseases and have them grow up strong and healthy teach them to like water. They may have this desire naturally, but it is more than likely they will want to drink with meals, which is considered by some to be the wrong time for drinking.

The drinking of water is largely a matter of habit with the human family. It should be a matter of instinct. Little mammals of the animal kingdom follow this instinct, which is strong in the young of all animals. But babies must depend for the gratification of this instinct upon the wisdom of mothers. Often when babies cry and you think they want nourishment they are only thirsty.

Sometimes this instinct will assert itself when your child is old enough to make his needs known, but often that instinct has been stifled and the need of water is never felt unless in the heat of summer the child is attracted to it because of its coolness.

In this way he is deprived of one of the most valuable aids to health and beauty. The free use of water washes the kidneys and the intestines of many of their impurities and thus cleanses the skin and aids it in its work. The practice of drinking plenty of water makes the skin cleaner and often more rosy. This shows the result of water as a cleanser of the sys-

The water should be boiled, bottled and kept cool in a refrigerator. The boiling eliminates the carbonic gas and the carbonates of lime, but it also eliminates a very desirable elementfree oxygen.

To overcome this partly, pour a cupful of water back and forth into another cup a few times. The water will then retain some of the oxygen of the air and will be more wholesome. After your child reaches an age where he eats solid food you can let him have filtered water. It is better than water kept standing in vessels and bottles, where the organisms tend to increase. If your child is inclined to swallow his food rapidly do not let him first bolt it down and then wash it down with water. This will result in the weakening of the juices needed in dissolving the food and will finally result in digestion. The use of water at meals also results in the bloating of Friction always takes time. An object rolling down a smooth hill goes much faster than when it bumps along over stones and cobbles. A courteous remark will carry you quicker to the bargain than querulous bickerings over prices which the saleswoman cannot control. When you allow the saleswoman to bring out dozens of forty and fifty dollar suits when you know you will not pay a cent over $25 you are wasting your own time and hers. Happy New Year Greeting to all ring to the greeting of a year hence, and HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Twenty citizens of Reading recently assembled at the home of F. W. B. and the children came trooping to the Pratt on Sanborn street, and organized Battle Green. oldest in the town and is one of the oldest dwellings north of Boston. The findings of census takers for the 1915 state tabulation have been footed up sufficiently to give the population statistics. These give a total of 3,693,310 as the population of the state, 1,587,093 having homes in what is called the Metropolitan District. This is a gain of 11.5 per cent in the five years since the U.S. census was taken. For the state the increase is 23 per cent over the state census of 1905. There is a decrease in the number of males and consequently an increase in the other sex. Suffolk County made the largest numerical gain in population, rising from 731,388 to 826,801, and Middlesex was a good second in increase,from 669,915 to 733,624. No county lost, but Nantucket registered the smallest gain-from 2,962 to 3,166.

With its leader gone and others connected with him withdrawing their support, it is not strange that the now famous Ford Peace Expedition receives scant courtesy abroad. However noble or praiseworthy the motives of participants, there was from the outset a strange lack of definiteness in methods of procedure and frank discussion of the scheme that might have resulted in smoothing out friction and development of a course which perhaps would have commanded at least the respect of those the party was planned to influence. Xmas Eve at Lexington.

The Lexington Community X mas celebration was attended by success in every department and, as far as we have learned, nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the evening in the way of accident or mishap. The only accessory lacking to make the evening ideal in its beauty and sentiment was the snow. The illuminated houses and their myriad candle lights, the great Xmas tree on the Battle Green with its flashing lights of red, white and green, the perfect poise of the "Star of Bethlehem," which bathed our readers. The old record of mistakes, the locality in light,-all of this could failure, or wrong is all behind us,-closed only have been enhanced with a carpet and sealed. The celebration began at five o'clock, when the several Sunday school Xmas festivals at the churches were concluded of Miss White, the supervisor of music in the Lexington schools, they sang a series of perfectly trained and sang with splendid volume and sweetness of tone. This feature was greatly enjoyed and highly commended. The carols and hymns were continued in the evening by an adult chorus that had covered the route from the corner of Mass. avenue and Parker street, through Hancock street to the Oakmont district, then to the Russell House and back by the avenue to the Battle Green, where the entire repertoire was sung. The singing was just as fresh and vigorous at the conclusion as it was at the beginning, Mr. Clarence E. Briggs directing with his usual skill, bringing out highly effective results. The old Xmas Noel was perhaps the most enjoyed. It rang out sweetly and clearly on the air. The Battle Green, encircled by its fine example of Old New England homes, lit from foundation stone to topmost peak, was a scene awakening the utmost admiration. The old historic houses,—Bucknam Tavero, the Merriam and Harrington houses, were especially adapted to this old-fasioned mode of illumination. The candle-lighting was continued up and down the avenue, up Hancock and other side streets, while the hillside which has full line of the winter sports, including came from the old Ryan farm.

In four automobiles they visited the sick and the shut-ins in various parts of the town, including the Symmes Arlington Hospital, where their singing was much appreciated. Still another service was that rendered by Mr. Wm. T. Foster, Jr., who, with his cornet, played some of the loveliest of the Christmas carols near the Homer residence, prior to the coming of the Glee singers, and he was joined by Mrs. Herbert W. Almost Instantly Killed.

One of those sad and seemingly impossible casualties with fatal consequences took place on Tuesday evening, at about five o'clock, nearly opposite the residence of Dr. Atwood on Mass. avenue, Arlington, where the injured man was taken and died almost immediately, if we are correctly informed.

Cornelius Patterson, aged forty, was On the eve of departure he gave the metro-driving a team up the avenue, seated on a lieving his spite. wagon used for teaming swill. When not far from in front of First Baptist church the team was run into, it is said, by one of the motor vehicles of the Clearing House Parcel Post of Boston. The motor struck the wagon in such a way that the linchpin was enapped off. The horse started up, dragging the front wheels from under the wagon, with the result that it was precipitated to the ground. The sudden concussion and the starting of the horse threw Patterson from his seat and it was at the instant and when the wagon went down that he was caught under its heavy load. The injury was to chest, crushing in ribs which punctured the lungs.

Patterson was employed, we are informed, by Mrs. Richard Irwin of 117 Mt. Vernon street, Arlington. The body was conveyed from Dr. Atwood's to the Hartwell undertaking rooms on Medford street and here it was viewed by Dr. Mc-'affery, the medical examiner for this district. The relatives of the deceased live at Marlboro, Mass.

Both were lighted with electricity and after the legend had been read by the minister, Rev. Mr. Emig, all the lights were turned out with the exception of those which lighted the cross and star. These shone brightly as the pledges of "self, substance and service" were brought to the cross, enclosed in envelopes, the pledges coming from one hundred and eighty-five. During the Promenade Concert and Dance.

The Arlington Boat Club, encouraged by its success last winter in catering for two large dances combined with concert programs by the First Corps Cadet Band, has entered the field again this season, and Tuesday evening current gave another dance of the same nature and even with greater success in point of attendance than at the parties given a year ago.

Friendship, Love and Truth, our motto grand, Which we try to practise and firmly stand To let all the world know, as best we can, Our love of God and our fellow-man. Robbins Memorial Town Hall was none too large to accommodate the patrons of the party, for fully three hundred were present. The spectators occupied a large percentage of the seats in the gallery and took their pleasure in listening to the popular and finely rendered concert numbers. It was also a fine vantage point from which to witness the dancing and comment on the toilettes worn.

The floor space was almost devoid of seats, the corridors being used for seating the dancers, while the upper section of the west corridor was spread with tables for the serving of the buffet refreshments in the serving of the buffet refreshments in charge of caterer N. J. Hardy. In the evergreen trees brightened with pointsettias. A row of palms and a woodland drop scene set off the platform space. The dance card and concert program also gave a list of the attractions at the Boat club for the entertainment season. Mr. Roger W. Homer managed the party with entire competency under the sanction of Prest. Geo. H. Peirce. It would be a hopeless task to name the participants or describe the toilettes. The latter were very modish and many were beautiful, while there were others quite startling in effect. All contributed to a scene constantly changing, full of color and variety. The bouffant effect in skirts was popular and quite universally becoming and there was even a suggestion of the boop skirt which was quite »dmired. Among the widely known Arlington people present were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Saul, the latter president of the Arlington Woman's Club, the Henry Hornblowers and party, the F. V. Noyes, Hon. and Mrs. Bailey of Groton, Supt. Scully and party, the H. W. Reeds, the Messrs. Elwell and party, the Everett P. Turners with Miss Pierce and the Robert Bacons, the latter of Winchester, Mrs. Stickney and daughters. There was an agreeable and congenial group of dancers from Nor-fold road, Mrs. Homer and the several members of her family. The young married people from all sections of the town. especially Mystic-Side, added their full share to the assemblage, while the young girls and collegiates were, we must admit, the most fascinating contingent. Socially, musically and otherwise the affair passed off with great eclat.

The public has been so eager to see "The Girus Girl" during the past week at the Castle Square, that it will be continued for a second week, beginning next Monday. Children and their elders have alike responded to its humor and its melody, and it is proving again the popularity of Mr. Craig's annual holiday entertainment.

John Drew's new comedy, "The Chief," which is now being given to delighted audiences at the Hollis Street Theatre, has proved to be decidedly worthy of all the good things that were said of it in advance. The comedy is one of the most charming vehicles that Mr. Drew has had in a long time. It is rather late in the day to speak of Mr. Drew's ability. When the actor's annual engagement is announced the one thing theatregoers hope is that he has a good play and one worthy of his that he has a good play and one worthy of his efforts. That he will give a fine performance of any role he undertakes is a certainty and it of any role he undertakes is a certainty and it is yet to be said that the actor has ever disappointed. The pleasing thing about the actor's present play is that it is really good. It amuses, it interests, it gives one a little thrill and never does it offend good taste. "The Chief" presents a picture of life in England at the present time price of the property of the price of th Xmas Eve from his extensive business trip through New England and middle eastern states, to spend the holidays with his family.

Bethel Lodge No. 12, I. O. O. F.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 29th, Bethel Lodge held a roll call. On account of the snow storm the invited guests did not come, but a good number of lodge members were present. After the business of the evening was disposed of, the N. G., Harold B. Needham, called on P. G. Warren A. Peirce, one of the oldest past-grands of the lodge, to take the chair. A large number of brothers answered to their name. Speeches were made by the brothers present and, P. G. Oscar Needham read the following original and peculiarly appropriate lines:-Our Three-Link Chain.

We are gathered here, as Odd Fellows true, Some are old ones, others are new, All have been taught the lesson of Friendship as it should be Friendship, the first link in our chain of three.

Our hearts are full of right good cheer To every Brother, both far and near, Inspired by love, as it ought to be, Love, the greatest link of all three. Friendship, for each other, with all our might,

Love to guard us and guide us aright, Truth will appear, as it must be Truth, the last link, in our chain of three

Dear Brothers assembled here tonight, We cannot trace time in its hurried flight, But, whether or not we meet again Dare not forget "our three-link chain."

A fine collation was served in the banquet hall.

Mr. Peirce, Sr., selected his two sons, Warren A., Jr. and Horace Peirce, as his right and left supporters. The other oldest officers occupying the chairs were:

During the evening there were speeches by Warren A. Peirce, James S. Richardson, Nathaniel E. Whittier, Archibald Scale and George Foster. In connection with the roll-call the annual election of officers of the lodge was held and the following elected :-

The officers will be publicly installed next Wednesday evening in their hall.

CURIOUS ANDORRA LURE OF CHECKERS

of All Republics.

A PATCH IN THE PYRENEES. LONG KNOWN AS "DRAUGHTS."

This Tiny Nation, Where All Men Are Really Equal, Has Never Produced a Page of Literature, a Bar of Music, a Painting Nor a Leader of Men.

For 1,100 years, since its foundation as a republic in 805 (and no one knows for how many centuries before that). curious little Andorra has gone its own strange way utterly oblivious to the progress of the other nations of Europe. It has its own idea of the meaning of life, and it lives according to that. A traveler entering the republic today will find it exactly as it was 1,000 years ago.

It is a republic which has never achieved anything in its long and vague history; a republic which has never produced a page of literature nor a bar of music nor, a painting; a republic which has never had a place in the councils of Europe and has never asked for one; a nation which has never produced an ambitious man.

Andorra consists of six counties and boasts about a dozen towns. Its entire population is 5,000 souls.

The chief occupation of the people of Andorra is cattle raising, and thousands upon thousands of cows may be seen browsing in the rich pastures, yet it has never occurred to Andorrans to milk these cows, and butter and milk are unknown in the republic. Dairy products are nonexistent. The only cheese made is that from the milk of sheep. Visitors find it impossible to procure milk or cream for their coffee. Andorrans themselves use brandy instead and think it is better than anything else in coffee.

In 805 Louis the Debonair laid siege to the city of Urgel, which is to the south of Andorra. The Andorrans, led by Marc Almugaver, took up arms to aid the French, and for their assistance Louis gave them a charter and permitted them to be self governing.

As it now exists it is the smallest republic in the world. It is situated in the Pyrenees between France and Spain. It is about eighteen miles wide and sixteen miles long from north to south. It is difficult of access, as there is not a single railroad running through or near it.

Its capital is Andorra la Viella, with a population of 500 and containing the Casa de la Vall, or house of representatives. This is a large stxteenth century building at the extremity of the town, overlooking the valley toward Spain. It is parliament hou town hall, school, palace of justice and hotel for the councilors all in one. It is also used as a temporary prison in the rare cases when a prison is necessary. Crime in Andorra is practically unknown. The only Andorrans suffering imprisonment are the smugglers of tobacco caught by the French or Spanish custom officers, and these are not looked upon as malefactors by their fellow citizens. Smuggling is regarded as a legitimate trade.

There is no police department and no police. Every citizen has the power to arrest, but this privilege is rarely used.

The territory was, once densely wooded and is said to derive its name from the Moorish Aldarra, "the place thick with trees," but almost all the forests have been destroyed for fuel. The climate is generally cold, with very severe winters. The land is chiefly devoted to grazing for the numerous flocks and herds. But on the sheltered southern slopes it is carefully cultivated and produces grain, potatoes, fruit and tobacco. The local industries are of the most primitive kind and show little or no advance since the middle ages.

The only roads are bridle paths, with the exception of one municipal road connecting Andorra with the high road to Seo de Urgel and Manreso by way of the Balira valley.

Andorra is perhaps the truest democracy in the world. There is no nobility, and there is no class distinctions. All men are equal, not only in the eyes of the law but in the fullest sense of the word. The first citizen of the land, the president, is a farmer.

The republic is governed by twentyfour representatives, elected every four years. These representatives choose one of their number as president of the republic. His salary is 80 pesetas a year, or $20. Representatives get 10 pesetas, or $2.50 a year.

There is no such thing as poverty in Andorra. Every one has enough and has no desire for any more. Though they are hard drinkers, cases of intoxication are very rare. They speak their own language. Andorran, but French is taught at the schools. The school system is regulated by the French, and for this service Andorra pays annually to the French government 900 francs. or $180. From this it may be seen that taxation is very low. Doctors' services are absolutely free, and drug stores supply their pagroßs without charge.

Andorrans drink a great deal, and they are untidy in their personal appearance. But they are extremely honest, and theft is unknown in the country. Though descended from an ancient race, they are not good looking. Their faces are hard and uncomely, but that is because their lives are hard. The women work beside the men in the field, and femining telsure and paint and powder are unknown.-New Lork Sun.

Oldest, Smallest and Strangest A Game That Has Been Played For Twenty Centuries.

Plate and Homer Mentioned the Game In Their Writings, and Many Relice of It Have Been Unearthed From the Tombs of Ancient Egypt.

In the messengers' room of a big industrial plant two boys hovered meditatively over a checkerboard of red and black squares and moved their "men" from square to square with much premeditation. An old man chanced that way and, lured by the contest, stopped and looked on. Taking the liberties or the rights that his years warranted, he suggested a move and was soon absorbed in the game. Another man came by and stopped, and soon there was a group around the silent and intent contestants. The lure of checkers was upon them.

This game in slightly modified forms has exercised its fascination upon the human race for centuries that cannot be counted. "Checkers" is a new name for an ancient game. To English speaking people it was long known as "draughts," and in all the languages of civilized men it has a name. There are variations in the way of playing it, but it is the familiar checkers of our time just the same. So many things come to light out of the ancient tombs of Egypt that it strikes the modern man as remarkable how many articles they buried with men in those dim, long gone ages, but out of tombs at least twenty centuries old explorers, excavators and tomb breakers have brought forth pieces of checkerboards and the disks which for some reason are called "men." And as such things have been found in tombs that were sealed twenty centuries ago it is possible that some time in very much older tombs explorers may find relics of checkers.

In the British museum one of the exhibits in the Egyptian collection is a board and men of the ancient game which came out of one of those ancient tombs. Some of the oldest of the mural decorations of ancient Egypt depict players engaged at draughts, or whatever the ancient Egyptians may have called the game.

Classic references may be found to draughts. Plato mentioned it and writes that it was the invention of an Egyptian whom he called Hermes Trismegistus, but where and how Plato got the information are not clear. It is very easy to say that such and such a man invented such and such a game, but close investigation usually proves that he hit on some adaptation or variation of a very much older game.

Tracing the genesis of a game of skill or chance usually leads the investigator too far back in the mists of the past to be sure that he has found the correct answer.

This game is also mentioned by Homer, and he records the observation that it was played during the period with which the "Odyssey" deals. There is little doubt that the Greeks played the game and that at a later period the Romans played a variant of it, which they called "latrunculi."

It was early played through northern Europe and was played there at such a remote period that it was said to have been one of the few things which were not introduced in that region by the Romans.

It was one of the most popular games in Europe during the sixteenth century. In the Library of Congress are several old books treating of the game. Samuel Johnson once wrote a preface to a book on the game of draughts which one William Payne had composed at the expense of much time and

Students of checkers and very old players of the game recall the names of Anderson, an Englishman, and Wyllie, "the herd laddie," who were famous checker players about half a century ago. Wyllie traveled all over the world playing contests with local checker experts and enthusiasts. Martens, an English player, and two Americans, Yates and Barker, succeeded to the fame of Anderson and Wyllie.-Washington Star.

Richard Cromwell.

Oliver Cromwell tried to train his son to be a worthy successor as protector, but the attempt was a failure. Richard was easy going and amiable and more addicted to sports than to statecraft. He was the acknowledged lord protector from Sept. 3, 1658, to May 25, 1659, but cut little figure as such. He did not relish official duties and much preferred having a good time. The cavaliers called him "Queen Dick," and as attracting or endued with attracothers still less respectfully spoke of him as "Tumbledown Dick." He was glad to quit when parliament told him to get out. After his abdication, however, he conducted himself with credit and even with dignity. He lived in quiet retirement for fifty-three years and died July 12, 1712, at the ripe old age of ninety.—Argonaut.

The Shrew. The shrew was originally the shrew mouse, which, when her young were helpless, would fight desperately in their defense, and so well known was an enemy at times when the nest needed protection, that the word became applied to a woman who was ever ready to seek a quarrel.

Be stlent or say something better than silence.-I'ythagoras.

BUYING A DIAMOND.

f Money is No Object You Can Get an Absolutely Perfect Stone.

The properly cut diamond has fiftyeight facets, including the table and ollet, thirty-two facets above the girlle and twenty-four facets below. The surface of the table should be 40 per ent of the whole.

Perfect, colorless stones form only 5 per cent of all the diamonds produced. A diamond is considered perfect in formation when no flaw or imperfection can be detected under the ordihary "loop" or magnifying glass used by jewelers. The flaws usually found are carbon spots (where the carbon has not crystallized perfectly), feathers, bubbles, hairs, flaky formation, like that in a piece of ice when struck by a hammer. The absolutely perfect stone must be free from all of these defects and cut in the right proportions. The "clean" diamond is free from any flaws or inclosures and is most difficult to find. Many of these daws are so small as to be imperceptible to the naked eye and really do not affect the brilliancy and beauty

Do not expect to get an absolutely perfect stone for any reasonable figure, for they are so rare as to command excessive prices. If you want a good stone see to it that it is of good color and brilliancy and is well cut."

WHEN YOU GET ANGRY.

Influence of the Emotion Upon the Adrenal Glands.

Just above the kidneys there are two mall glands, each about as big as' a pea, known as suprarenal capsules or adrenal glands. They belong to that small group of glands in our bodies which have no ducts and whose secretions, whatever they are, pass directly into the blood. These two little glands play an enormous part in the physiology of hate.

The secretion of these little glands is called adrenalin, and its secretion cannot be controlled by the will. When it is poured into the blood the amount of sugar in the blood will rise in the course of a few minutes between 10 and 30 per cent.

A strong emotion, such as hate, causes an increased secretion of agreealin in the glands and simultaneously an increase of sugar in the blood, and this sudden accession of sugar supplies the muscles with a much needed food. So that one of the effects of the secretion of adrenalin would be a direct benefit to a man in a rage wishing to exercise stern muscular effort involving fight, conflict or struggle. It has been proved that the removal of the adrenal glands has a weakening effect on muscular power, and an injection of adrenalin has an invigorating effect, and not only does adrenaling bring out sugar from the liver stock to feed the muscles, but it also restores fatigued muscles, at least temporarily.

Men in a state of hatred, therefore, are in the same condition as men who are putting out their utmost physical effort. They are in a condition, should they come across the object of their hate, to exert the maximum harm upon it.-New York American.

Why the "Baltic" Sea?

How the Baltic sea got its name is unknown. It looks thoroughly classic -"Mare Balticum." But Tacitus knew this stretch of water as the Suevic sea, from the neighboring people of the Suevi, and the name Baltic does not appear before the eleventh century in the "Chorographia Scandinaviae" of Adam of Bremen. It is supposed to have some connection with the great and little "Belts." Germans, Swedes and Danes call these waters the East ea (Ostsee) a name which is obviously impossible for a Russian.—London Standard.

Newton and Gravitation.

Sir Isaac Newton never attempted to tell the people of his day what gravitation was. His very frank statement was as follows: "I do not anywhere take it upon me to define the kind or manner of any action, the causes or physical reasons thereof or attribute forces in a true and physical sense to certain centers when I speak of them tive powers."

An Explanation and a Hint. "How do you account for his remark-

It has been estimated that a million bersons assembled in a crowd, with the courage of this little animal, which | due allowance of three square feet a would even go out of its way to seek person, would cover an area of about seventy acres.

QUIZZING THE CHEMIST.

Curious and Amusing Experience of Sir Hiram Maxim.

Having occasion to use some metallic mercury in his London laboratory, Sir Hiram Maxim sent his man, Silverman, out to purchase "one pound of metallic mercury in a strong glass bottle with a cork stopper." In "My Life" he tells the story of what happened.

Silverman soon returned and said that he could not find any metallic mercury. I asked him whether he had tried at a shoe shop or a beer shop. "No," he replied, "at a wholesale ehemist's."

I told him he must have made a mess of it somehow, and I sat down and wrote out carefully, "Wantedone pound of metallic mercury in a strong glass bottle with a cork stop-

Before long he came back and said that there was no such stuff as "metallic mercury" known in the chemist's shop and that he had been to a wholesale place. As the shop was not more than 200 yards away, I went around with him and said to the man behind the counter:

"I have sent this young man here twice for some metallic mercury, and he tells me that you have nothing of the kind."

"No, we never have any call for it." be replied.

"But is not this a chemist's shop?" "Yes; one of the largest in London." "Do you sell all kinds of chemicals?" "Yes."

Then how does it happen that you have no metallic mercury?" "We have never had any call for it before. We do not know what it is." "Have you any bicarbonate of soda?" "Yes: tons of it." "Have you any bicarbonate of pot-

"Certainly; any amount of it."

"What is bicarbonate of potash a bicarbonate of?" "Why, naturally of potash." "Could you let me have some potash before it is made up into a bicarbonate?" "Certainly."

"Have you any bichloride of mer-"Yes; lots of it."

"What is bichloride of mercury bichloride of?" Here I had him. I asked him if it were his first day on duty. "No; I have been here twenty years." The head man, who had overheard our conversation, then came up and said, "Why, of course the gentleman wants quicksilver." Curiously enough, it had never oc-

POWDER HOUSE PERILS.

A "Jag" Without Whisky and a Weird Nervous Disorder. Alcohol is greatly feared by the powder people, and rightly so. But they cannot eliminate a strange malady that appears among their workmen in the powder mills. As subterranean labor in compressed air produces "the bends," work in the powder mills creates the "powder house jag," which is described as follows by Merle Crowell in the American Magazine: A powder house is no place for an unsteady hand or an unseeing eye. But the "powder house jag," a freak product of the plants themselves, is something which no amount of diligence can forefend. Large quantities of alcohol are used in the making of smokeless powder, and the air in the shops frequently gets heavy with its fumes. Men have been known to leave the plants reeling and stupefied, while one serious accident was caused because a fume fuddled workman threw on both the high pressure and low pressure brakes at the same time.

A weird nervous disorder that steals upon powder makers has been called "powderitis." Treading all day with rubber sole shoes in a shop which a vagrant spark will change into a crater, they get keyed up to a nervous tension that never runs down, with the result that even when off duty they nearly jump through their collars at an unexpected flash of light. Although powder, unless it is confined, does not explode at a spark under normal conditions, a powder shop may be changed into an inferno of wildfire in a few seconds.

Window Glass.

It is certain that there were glass windows in Pompeii, as the proof is found in its ruins. In more modern times it is known that windows of some kind were glazed so early as the third century, if not before, though the fashion was not fairly introduced until it was done by Benedict Biscop about 674. Windows of glass were used in private houses in Italy as early as 1177. -Exchange.

A GERMAN ARMY CORPS.

Just What It Means In Men, Animals Vehicles and Food,

Just how much space does an army corps require? According to a German writer, a German army corps consists of 41,000 men, 14,000 horses and 2,400 vehicles, including the cannon.

Such a body of men and their belongings, on a single road, make a procession about thirty miles long. Even when in fairly close touch with the enemy, the length of a corps is about fifteen miles, and when the front detachments become engaged in a battle it is five or six hours before the men in the rear get into action to assist them.

Before this war began it was generally supposed that a single army corps would occupy about two and one-half or three miles of the fighting line, but in actual experience it has been found that the average front of a corps is considerably broader—namely, from three and one-half to five miles. An army of ten corps is not very large as armies go in this war, but it would fight on a front about thirty-seven miles long, and a man who undertook to walk from one wing to the other would require twelve or fourteen hours to do it.

An army corps consumes nearly 300,-000 pounds of food a day, about 100,000 pounds for the men and 200,000 pounds for the horses. Even under the most favorable conditions it requires a train of 150 wagons to bring up a day's food.

To Identify Babies.

Use of footprints to prevent confusion in the identification of babies has been adopted in Chicago's largest maternity hospital. The prints are obtained in the first hour of life, and the methods used are simple. The infant's feet are pressed against an ink pad, and then the inky foot is placed on a paper of moderate gloss, on which the impression of the tiny lines is made. This new method of identification is regarded as a permanent record of value from a scientific standpoint. Scientists say the lines will never change. There will be no chance, they contend, of a substitution of babies.

Gold Mining In Alaska.

The sequence of events so often ob served in the history of gold mining camps has been repeated in the Willow creek district, Alaska. The earliest prospectors in 1897 were primarily interested in the search for placer gold and, having found it, were too busily engaged in mining to trace the stream gold to the veins from which it originally came. It was nearly ten years later that the first of the valuable quartz veins that now yield most of the gold mined in the district was discovered. Since 1906, however, quartz mining has progressed steadily and has rested upon a substantial basis.

The Word "Movie."

To a thousand editors the question was recently submitted as to whether the word "movie" is to be regarded as a legitimate English word to be used without quotation marks. Five hundred voted for the word's admission without adornment; 220 declared that the word is still on probation; 280 failed to express an opinion, but are probably to be counted with the majority.

Whale Sausage.

In Norway it has been found that whale meat, vast quantities of which have formerly been thrown away, makes a palatable and nutritious sausage. The meat has proved so successful for this purpose in Scandinavian countries that engineers are now working to develop machinery for cutting up the huge leviathans and working their carcasses into sausage.

War and Art. The Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York has suffered three financial blows from the war, for the contributions of art patrons are smaller, there is no chance of the city's annual gift of $200,000 being increased, and the membership of the institution has fallen off by more than a thousand.

cient knowledge, we are told by those who should know. Didn't Dr. Charles Eliot tell us we could get a liberal education from a number of selected books? We are again reminded that it is easy to obtain a foundation of knowledge in a remarkably short space of time. A speaker before an advertising club recently named six books with which one should spend a half hour each night for six months and automatically become an educated man. It seems easy to tell a man he should read a certain set of books to gain knowledge, but it usually takes some training before a man can be sufficiently fit to read these books and get all the good out of them. And when he does reach that stage it is unfortunate that he in all likelihood requires a different guide to knowledge than the ones named.

The present isn't the first time a president has chosen a widow for his bride. Woodrow Wilson, it seems, is only a follower of a well established precedent. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Fillmore and Benjamin Harrison selected widows for wives, while Tyler and Roosevelt took unto themselves two wives apiece, but none of these latter brides had been led to the altar before. As for Andrew Jackson, he established his own precedent and married a divorcee. This would lead you to believe that when the darts of Cupld strike home in our highest official circle they strike with exceptional force. Even the opportunities for comparisons have no terrors for the principals.

Time is divided into two periods by Professor Steinmetz, the electrical expert. The discovery of electricity is the dividing line. It is probable that Marconi counts the new eras from the time he perfected the use of wireless. while Lake cuts his notch when the first submarine was launched, and Whitehead the torpede, Maxim the silencer, and so on down the line, including Ford and his peace ship. They all have a claim. We can't very well discredit any one of them, so why not roll over and wake up in the morning to hail a new era on your own ac-

=The Lexington Golf Club, so it has been reported, is facing a problem—the matter of accommodating its large membership over the club's nine-hole course in North Lexington. The course is now overcrowded. The club has twenty five names on the waiting list and more have signified their intentions of joining, so thy; recitation, Santa's Cake, Doris McCarthy; signified their intentions of joining, so that come definite action will have to be taken by the club officials before spring. Either the membership must be reduced or more land bought to lengthen the course. Some time ago the club offered to buy some land back of the eighth hole, but the owner, so it is said, wanted a house lot price and the deal fell through. The club is now considering buying the woods back of the third hole, and besides lengthening the third, it would lengthen the fourth, as that tee would be placed back accordingly. One plan in view calls for the placing of the eighth green up to Hatfield, Hutchinson, rw. ... the left, where a short drive now lands on the way to the ninth. This would make the eighth an elbow hole, and a tee nearby would be but a pitch across to the ninth. The club would like to add another nine holes to its course, but land is harder to Hodgdon, g..... get than money in that locality,-

=The quartette of the Orthodox Cong'l church endered with splendid effect its musical numbers at the Sunday morning service on last Sabbath, assisted by Louis Nast, cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Theodore Cella, harpist. The harp solo was exquisitely rendered, as was the vello solo. The trio for or-gan, 'cello and harp was one of the gems of the program, which may be also said of the soprano solo by Mrs. Herbert Reed, who was accompanied by the three instruments. The quartette is made up of Mrs. Reed soprano, Miss Luise Leimer alto, A. C. Whittemore tenor, and Dr. S. A. Wodell bass. Mr. H. Richter Austin is the organist. The program was printed in our last week's issue.

=The funeral of Daniel O'Brien was held at his residence, 56 Palmer street, Monday morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated in St. Agnes' church by the paster, Rev. Mathew J. Flaherty. The music was by the regular choir under the direction of Miss Lucy J. Butler. During the service Rev. Fr. Creedon, S. J., sat within the chancel. The bearers were Daniel F. Creedon, William Connors, Edward Cummings, Francis Connors, George W. McCellan and John Connors. Interment was in St. Paul Cemetery. Mr. O'Brien was one of the oldest resideats of the town and had lived here many years. He was in his 81st year. The sympathy of the community goes out to the family at this time, this being the second death in the family within a few weeks, the youngest daughter dying only a short time ago.

=The class of 1914. A. H. S., held its first reunion in Cotting Hall, Monday, Dec. 27th, with over fifty members present. A banquet, with appropriate toasts. and parodies on popular songs, had been arranged by a committee consisting of the class officers, Harold Kimball pres., Thomas Donnelly vice-pres., Katherine Eberhardt sec., and Reginald Squire treas., assisted by Bertha Yerrinton, Pauline Garman and Elizabeth Taylor. Jerry Crowley gave a reading and Mildred Partridge afforded much pleasure by her clever rendering of songs, with humerous personal hits. The head table was adorned with an immense bowl of jouquils, representing the class colors, the high scorers were Fred D. Cloyes with a gift of Miss Juliet Munsell, a friend of 37 and William F. Young with $ 34. A ertson, the class advisor, was presented with a beautiful bouquet of sweet peas, roses and orchids by the members of the hold reunions annually and to retain the present class officers.

=A few weeks ago the ground in the rear of what was formerly the Wellington estate on Mass. avenue near the failroad crossing, now the property of Mr. A. C. LaBreque, was cleared of buildings. On this large plot, and in a remarkably short time, a building built with concrete blocks has been put up, with ample cellar space of dimensions sufficient to accommodate eight full length bowling alleys, retiring rooms and seating space for visitors,—an up-to-date bowling alley in every respect, being equipped with the best appliances for this now very popular game. For a try-out, the alleys were opened on the afternoon of Dec. 24th, but it was not until formal "opening" took place. On that ed with lovers of the game, both male and female, and the affair was a great success. Mr. LaBreque furnished a treat Tuller and Melville Webb. Santa Claus of sandwiches, salads, coffee, etc., and by every possible courtesy contributed his full share to the pleasure of the evening. Most of the time since the alleys we'e they are perfect is shown by the big scores piled up in practice games by the big bunch of near experts residing in

To-night (Friday) Mr. Harold Lockwood will appear at the Arlington Theatre in a photo-play drama of Harold McGrath's famous novel, "The Lure of the Mask," a thrilling Mutual masterpiece in 4 acts. The charming vitagraph star, lovely Lillian Walker, will present a 2-part comedy drama.

To-morrow (Saturday) a special program has been arranged for the children's matinee, including a delightful comedy drama entitled, "Otherwise Bill Harrison," which is really the dream of a newsboy. The charming Majestic children will appear and the Keystone players will give one of their best cemedies.

The daily change of pictures has proven so popular that it will be continued. Every night next week a splendid 3-part Vitagraph or Edison feature will be given, surrounded by plenty of good comedies and western pictures. Every Tuesday "The Ventures of Marguerite" featuring dainty Marguerite Courtot, will be shown, and Wednesday only the popular serial "The Diamond from the Sky."
